INTRODUCTORY LETTER

October 30, 1915.

His Excellency HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.

DEAR SIR: I herewith submit the sixth annual report of the Superintendent of Banks of the State of California, pursuant to section 140 of the Bank Act, enacted by the twenty-eighth session of the Legislature and effective July 1, 1909.

In the record of the work of the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1915, the adoption of many amendments to the Bank Act, suggested by the State Banking Department and accepted by the Legislature, has been of first importance. Some of these changes are fundamental; others are legal modifications of regulations which experience has justified; all have found expression because of our desire to make the Bank Act financially sound in the double relationship which it sustains to the banks and to the public.

The enactment of the Federal Reserve Act made necessary an entirely new system of reserve for state banks based upon, and in large measure conditioned by, the reserve requirements established for the conduct of federal banking institutions. In commercial banks the minimum of reserve has been reduced, but certain penalties have been provided for deficiencies. Any currency issued under authority of the United States may be counted as part reserve and commercial banks in the state system are not required to maintain a reserve against public deposits. Discretion is placed however in the Superintendent of Banks to designate all reserve depositaries upon nomination of the interested banks. Closely allied in purpose to these changes is that which gives to the Superintendent of Banks authority to limit the amount of funds which may be deposited by any commercial bank with any other commercial bank. In savings banks the minimum of reserve has been increased from four to five per cent and deposits of public money are not exempted. All but one fourth of this reserve however may consist of any currency issued under authority of the United States.

California was the first of the states to give explicit authority to banks under its government to associate themselves with any national reserve association. This permission was granted by the Legislature in 1913 and while no state bank in California has established such an association it was deemed wise by the Legislature this year to remove absolutely any suggestion that a state bank, joining the Federal Reserve Association as a member, may be liberated from the laws and supervision of this state. There was adopted therefore an amendment to the Bank Act providing that any state bank, associating itself with the Federal Reserve Association, shall exercise all powers not in conflict with the laws of this state and shall continue to be subject to all liabilities and duties imposed upon it by any law of this state and to all provisions of the Bank Act.

Of first significance is the amendment which enlarges the capacity of commercial banks to invest in acceptances. An unlimited authority in this reference has provoked in New York a warning against the danger of inflation and we have profited by that experience by restricting the field of investment to a closely guarded area. The use of bank acceptances is a new and practically untried expedient in American finance and under the permission given in this state carefully conceived precautions have been established.

The limitations drawn about this credit instrument are rigid. The consent of the Superintendent of Banks must first be obtained and an investment greater than one half of the capital and surplus of the investing bank is prohibited. No bank may accept for any one person, firm, co-partnership or corporation an amount in excess of ten per cent of the capital and surplus of such bank and every acceptance must be drawn by a person, firm, co-partnership or corporation engaged in agricultural, industrial or commercial business directly connected with the production, manufacture, purchase, sale or consignment of the goods involved in the transaction in which the acceptance originated. State banks have not yet availed themselves of the privilege granted.

There has been accomplished also a practical revision of the law which governs secured and unsecured loans in commercial banks, the statute in this regard being placed upon a logical foundation which protects the banks from the unwisdom of excessive or concentrated lines of credit yet permits the widest latitude of loaning capacity, compatible with sound banking practice.

In association with this amendment the activity of the credit bureau of the department is of moment. During the year we have accomplished much in our purpose to investigate conditions surrounding both secured and unsecured loans in the banks. We have sought to establish a policy that unsecured loans shall be fortified by financial statements of the borrowers. In our endeavor we have, almost without exception, met with the hearty co-operation of the banks and the result has been to improve gradually but positively the character of unsecured loans. So vital an element in the solvency of banks has given this department great concern and it is our plan as we progress to require that all unsecured loans, greater than a certain minimum, shall be supported by financial statements made by auditors whose only relation to the borrowers is that of accurate observers of conditions. The tendency of borrowers to pad their assets and underestimate their liabilities demands a corrective such as we suggest and which is now an accepted principle in the federal reserve system. Of equal importance in the work of the credit department is our thorough investigation of underlying securities that support secured loans. The expenses of the department have measurably been increased because of our activity in this field but the results attained justify fully the investment.

In our scrutiny of secured and unsecured loans there is presented perhaps no more difficult problem than that involved in commercial bank loans to directors and employees and to corporations, in which such persons have financial interest, and in savings bank loans to corporations in which the same beneficial association exists. In the solution of this question during the year we have made great strides. California is more advanced than any of the states or the federal government in its treatment of these loans and we are at particular pains to probe each transaction. Our review in this connection has been searching and has applied to secured loans in both savings and commercial banks as well as to unsecured which are permissible only in commercial banks. Much of our criticism has been directed against such loans, which, upon investigation, have been found to be improperly safe-guarded. It is worthy of suggestion that there are permitted loans to religious corporations, clubs and other membership corporations of which directors, officers, agents or employees are members or officers but where no financial benefit is involved. There is also established to the further advantage of safety in savings banks the restriction that loans may not be made to any corporation in which one or more of the directors or officers of the bank own a majority of the stock except with the previous approval of the Superintendent of Banks.

During the year savings bank investments have been further strengthened and protected by an amendment to the Bank Act which guards particularly the purchase of and loaning upon bonds. There has been established firmly in explicit expression the character of "net earnings" of corporations whose bonds and other securities are offered for investment by savings banks. No railroad, public utility or collateral trust bond is now available for investment by savings banks until its availability has been certified by the Superintendent of Banks. The strictest inquiry is made into the values supporting real estate bonds. Limitations are also placed upon the advertising of bonds in connection with their eligibility as investment by savings banks. The administration of these new features of the Bank Act has broadened the influence of supervision of the conduct of state banks and measurably improved the standard of investments.

The savings banks in the state system have justified every effort made in behalf of their well-being and security. Not a single notice of withdrawal was required during the year. Deposits grew until the enormous aggregate was on June 23, 1915, the date of the final called report of the fiscal year, $458,708,427.69, an increase of $9,466,788.12. This fact is deeply significant when it is considered that one of the tremendous problems, created in other American jurisdictions by the European war, has been to guard against the fear of savings depositors. The timidity and anxiety of savings depositors, evidenced by their demands for their money, forced the supervising officials of other states, notably of New York, to insist that all savings banks demand their maximum notices of withdrawal. Such an expedient was unthought of in California and we feel justified in the suggestion that confidence here has been the outcome of our insistent purpose to place our savings banks beyond the shadow of suspicion.

When therefore the Federal Reserve Board gave authority to national banks in this state to advertise for and to accept "savings accounts" I deemed it my immediate duty to protest and to inform the federal authorities as well as all national banks which assumed to offend against our law in this reference that I would prosecute to the full extent of state law all violations of the statute that prohibits such advertisement.

The first principle of safety established for Californian savings deposits is that they shall not be subjected to the hazards of commercial banking. National banks can give no such protection. Federal officials admit that national banks can not safe-guard savings deposits with restricted, conservative investments free from the dangers that necessarily accompany commercial risks. "Savings accounts" in national banks must share with commercial deposits the uncertainties of credit conditions and I shall seek full compliance with our law.

Mr. A. A. DeLigne, the attorney for this department, has stated our position in a very well considered brief and it is my purpose to resist a deception upon the people of the state which possesses potentialities for the greatest harm. National banks can not accept savings deposits in any sense which will protect these deposits against the exigencies of commerce or the crises that occur in credit and it is dangerous to the public to permit banks that can not assure safety to savings deposits to solicit for "savings accounts." I am pleased to report however that national banks thus far addressed on this subject have expressed their intention to obey the law of this state.

I am gratified also to report that the banks of this state are rapidly expressing their surplus in market values. Very large sums have been written off because of softening of bond values and investments of every character are being subjected to such scrutiny as will contribute to the strength of the institution. While some banks indulge too freely in the granting of overdrafts the subject is receiving close attention to the end that there may be substantial reductions and finally a practical elimination. It is noteworthy that the aggregate of borrowed money in state banks has shown during the year a decrease. While the remaining total is greater than sound banking justifies, the condition is not created by an effort by the banks to extend excessive lines of credit or to borrow that they may loan. We are persistent in our demand that this phase of unwise practice shall be minimized. We are pleased to report that in our efforts in this direction we are receiving the co-operation of the best informed bankers of the state.

Need was found during the year for the organization of five departmental savings and commercial banks and three commercial banks. Four banks widened the scope of their activities by adding commercial departments; six by creating savings departments and five by establishing trust departments. The assumption of trust functions by departmental banks is an important expansion of usefulness in the state system.

Seven banks sold their assets to stronger institutions and two became extinct by consolidation, thus measurably improving the tone of these which remained. Twenty-one banks established branch offices broadening their sphere of influence and giving to new communities the advantage of highly centralized credit facilities. Seven institutions accepted the privilege of making collections from school children giving vigorous encouragement to thrift in young people. Two banks and three branch offices voluntarily closed. One bank entered the national system. Two national banks sold their assets to state banks.

During the year calls for reports were issued for September 24, 1914, November 19, 1914, March 4, 1915 and June 23, 1915. At the close of business on June 23, 1915, there were 468 state banks with ninety-five branch offices. Of these 126 were commercial, 130 savings, 7 trust, 184 commercial and savings, 17 commercial, savings and trust, 1 commercial and trust and 3 savings and trust.

As of that date and summarized and compared in their salient features with the report of their condition as of date June 30, 1914, state banks record the following:

	June 30, 1914	June 23, 1915	Increase	Decrease

Showing the Financial Condition of State Banks at the Close of Business June 30, 1916

CALIFORNIA

SACRAMENTO.

INTRODUCTORY LETTER.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 30, 1916.

His Excellency HIRAM W. JOHNSON,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.

DEAR SIR: I herewith submit the seventh annual report of the Superintendent of Banks of the State of California, pursuant to section 140 of the Bank Act, enacted by the twenty-eighth session of the Legislature and effective July 1, 1909.

The dominating financial note of the fiscal year was an unexampled expansion in the industrial activity of the state. There was an unparalleled increase in the cash resources of the banks under state jurisdiction and a distribution of credits by them into avenues of productive energy almost five times as great in volume as during the preceding year. The state has enjoyed a year of steady progress, and while some of its industries profited from uncommon demands arising in the European war, the extreme inflation created by that cause has not reached California. Industries have been more productive than ever before in the history of the state and the outlook financially, industrially, and commercially is distinctly favorable.

State banks have met this situation with a commendable sense of their responsibilities as organizers of credit. The supply of loanable funds has been largely in excess of the demand of responsible borrowers and with very few exceptions state bankers have resisted any temptation to demoralize a year of remarkable expansion into one of dangerous inflation. They have loaned with discretion and adequately to meet legitimate demands. They have invested largely in bonds of well chosen safety and with maturities that assure a secondary reserve. They have reduced their obligations to other banks and they hold an aggregate of cash resources which gives to the state a banking power never before enjoyed by it.

It has been a year of prosperity for the banks of the state jurisdiction which are stronger and better conditioned than ever before. They possess in an unprecedented degree the confidence of the public. They have grown in service and new applications for licenses, in fields which suggest the need of banking facilities, are frequent. There were no failures during the fiscal year, a fact which now has become gratefully commonplace in the history of California banking.

Results of Department's Constructive and Critical Work.

The work of the State Banking Department has enlarged with the growth and expanding activity of the banks and it is worthy of observation that these banks have risen to meet their higher obligations and have accomplished the serious purpose of their creation under a strict supervision which was at first a subject of attack, then of acquiescence and now is the beneficiary of hearty support. The relation of the State Banking Department to the institutions under its jurisdiction has been one of co-operation in what should be a common purpose of how best to meet the need of the people of the state for safe, sound and adequate banking. The department has candidly and very frankly discussed with bankers under its authority the presence of undesirable features and their elimination. Very exceptional instances of usurious and criminal banking have been treated with that severity which occasion demanded. The department has sought to do a constructive work as well as to perform a duty of criticism and I beg to report in behalf of that endeavor a significant success.

In every phase of banking energy the facts of the fiscal year offer a startling comparison with those of any other in the financial life of the state. Compared with the fiscal year 1914-1915 the contrast is little less than astounding. At the close of business on June 30, 1916, the aggregate of assets in state banks was $817,744,349.70, an increase over the preceding year of $88,985,381.76. This represents an increase more than six times greater than that of the preceding year when the increase was $14,424,631.05. At the close of business on June 30, 1916, there were in state banks individual deposits aggregating $679,306,-191.66, an extraordinary increase over the preceding year of $97,896,-167.87. As compared with the fiscal year 1914-1915 the increase in individual deposits in the fiscal year 1915-1916 is more than sixteen times greater than the accomplishment of 1914-1915 when the increase was $5,852,511.69.

Of the increases in the latest fiscal year $70,201,819.54 are in the savings banks, making in these banks an aggregate of $528,910,247.23.

As compared with the preceding fiscal year the increase in savings deposits was more than seven times greater, the increase in savings deposits during the fiscal year 1914-1915 having been $9,466,788.12.

More Than Half a Billion in Savings.

One of the gratifying incidents of the increase in savings deposits is the school savings system which was legalized by amendment of the Bank Act in 1913. The plan has met with general approval and during the comparatively short time of its operation has been potent in its influence upon the school children of the state. They are being taught commendable habits of thrift. School authorities are co-operating with the banks in this campaign and during the year four banks were added to the list of those engaged in this admirable practice. The number of school children who are depositors has rapidly increased and the aggregate of their deposits is now material. I anticipate a substantial educational and physical achievement from this feature of banking activity.

There are now fifteen banks receiving school savings deposits within the limitations established in the Bank Act. There are 31,055 school savings depositors and their deposits aggregate $460,285.44. This result is representative of the school savings system in its infancy. It holds potentialities for great good and as it becomes more widely known its advantages will be better understood.

It is the policy of our law that savings deposits shall be absolutely free from the hazards of commercial banking. They form no part in the organization of credit. They represent the thrift and economy of the people of the state and both in theory and in practice they are not subject to the vicissitudes of commerce. It is a commentary on the wisdom of the state law and the character of its administration that the savings banks of this state enjoy such public confidence that they have now more than half a billion in deposits.

As an incident in the protection given to savings deposits by state law I am preparing to institute action against such national banks that persist in advertising for "savings accounts." These banks have sanction for their conduct in a ruling of the Federal Reserve Board. The Bank Act places an absolute prohibition upon such advertisement, restricting the solicitation of savings deposits to savings banks or to savings departments of departmental banks organized under state law and operating under state supervision. It is my purpose therefore to seek the enforcement of the state statute. National banks being commercial banks can not give to savings deposits the refuge against the vicissitudes of commercial banking which closely guarded, critically selected and strictly supervised securities insure. In a national bank so-called savings deposits are first on an equality of hazard with commercial deposits and then at a distinct disadvantage in the event of a financial crisis.

I am pleased to report that most of the national banks in the state have accepted our point of view and have not sought to obtain savings deposits. Those institutions that have evidenced their desire to acquire such deposits will be asked to defend their purpose in a test of the constitutionality of the state law.

Banks Show Growth, Wealth and Prosperity.

In the interpretation of the figures which are representative of the condition of the banks it is disclosed that the year has been one of liquidation as well as of carefully considered expansion. At the close of business on June 30, 1916, state banks had an aggregate of $494,567,278.84 in loans and discounts, an increase over the preceding year of an imposing total of $23,981,566.38. During the fiscal year 1914-1915 the increase in loans and discounts was $5,562,623.25. The aggregate of increased loans was therefore more than four times that of the preceding year, a fact indicative of the response made by the banks to meet the needs of a rapidly expanding industrial field. While the banks have met the reasonable requirements of a broadening commerce they have been careful to conserve the immense accretions to their own banking power. They have during the year increased their capital and surplus in substantial sums. They have materially reduced their totals of rediscounts and borrowed money. They have as compared with the preceding year a smaller aggregate of state, county and municipal deposits. With their bills payable and rediscounts reduced in amount, with loans and discounts increased and with deposits augmented more than ninety-seven millions the banks of the state jurisdiction show a healthy growth, increasing wealth and prosperity.

During the year the banks, in their policy to conserve their resources, increased their holdings in bonds in the sum of $23,924,666.98. Of this aggregate, $18,661,683.45 were invested by savings banks and $4,462,531.06 were purchased by commercial banks. The increase in deposits due from other banks during the year as compared with the preceding fiscal period was $27,984,003.55. The investment in bonds and the retention of so material a sum in bank deposits represent a consensus of opinion that legitimate credit requirements have adequately been met.

State banks reduced their borrowed money during the year in the sum of $3,785,697.07, giving an added evidence of their prosperity and their purpose to strengthen their condition. It has not been a practice of state banks to borrow money either to re-loan or to extend excessive lines of credit. The substantial contraction of this item during the year represents therefore that seasonal demands for credit, which are the only sound foundation for the expedient of bills payable, were fully met by the banks without seeking extraneous assistance. Deposits in state, county and municipal funds were reduced in the sum of $1,718,193.20 and the aggregate of rediscounts was cut in half. An increase of $1,258,840 in capital stock paid in and an increase of $1,248,974.64 in surplus are also items reflecting new strength in state banking institutions. The fact is more significant as there has been no interruption in the policy of having the banks express their surplus in market values by writing off such sums as represent softening in investment values.

It is of interest to note that all banks in the state, national as well as state, have reported to the State Controller and to this department an aggregate of $129,658.60 in unclaimed deposits. This sum represents all deposits unclaimed for more than twenty years. These moneys will escheat to the state and shall be deposited with the State Treasurer to be invested, accounted for and paid out as is provided in the case of other escheated property. It is the first time in the history of California that banks have been subjected to such a condition.

Significant Activities of Branch Offices.

One of the important economic facts of the fiscal year as it relates to the affairs of state banks was the licensing of fifteen new branch offices. The state statute governing the establishment of branch offices places no limitation upon their number or their locality except that a license must not be granted unless, in the opinion of the Superintendent of Banks, the public convenience and advantage will be promoted by a proposed branch office. The statute carries not only the thought of public convenience but public advantage as well. There were at the close of the fiscal year four hundred and sixty banks with one hundred and five branch offices in the state system.

None of these branches possess a separate entity. The affairs of each are not legally or financially distinguishable from its home office. Its functions are limited strictly by the capacity of the parent bank. The branch office possesses no distinct or separable capital, the law requiring, however, that the banking corporation which desires to open a new branch office must have for every branch office licensed, a capital of $25,000 in excess of that otherwise demanded by law. Two underlying motives have inspired the desire of the banks to create these branch offices and a third purpose, in addition to them, has frequently directed my action in licensing them.

Some of the branch offices have been licensed upon a satisfactory showing that they will contribute to the banking facilities supplied by the parent bank to the industrial, agricultural or commercial community which is naturally tributary to the parent bank and served by it in the conduct of its business. Ordinarily such branch offices are located within the political subdivision in which the main bank has its principal place of business, and they may be viewed simply as additional tellers' windows provided for convenience of the public. They are justified because of changing centers of business or residential population within the cities and because of the tendency of some municipalities to absorb suburban communities into metropolitan areas. Without the expedient of licensing branch offices some of the more remote and isolated of these districts would be deprived of banking accommodation because of the capital required by the classification of the larger cities.

Economic Advantages of Branch Offices.

Some of the branch offices have been opened in places far removed from the principal place of business of the parent bank. These branch offices represent an endeavor of the banks to expand the field of their operations beyond the territory which in a strictly local sense is naturally or financially tributary to them. These branch offices offer to the communities in which they are licensed greater assistance, larger loans and more extended credit than local institutions can afford. The justification of their existence rests in this fact and it is noteworthy that in every instance the parent bank entrusts very largely its loaning functions to the discretion of local advisory committees. These, briefly outlined, are the considerations which have directed favorable action in granting to banks the privilege of opening branch offices. Still another cause has often influenced my course in granting the desired license. Occasionally it happens that the general banking tone of a community will measurably be improved by the licensing of a branch office of a well established, safely conducted institution. Involved in the wish of such a corporation to enter the field is its plan to absorb by purchase a stagnant bank and thus to strengthen the credit situation.

I recommend, however, that a change be made in the law governing the creation of branch offices. Banks in their essential relation to the communities in which they are resident are public utilities. They are instituted primarily to organize the credit of the productive agencies of the people and to conserve savings. I am convinced, therefore, that banks should not be permitted to abandon their branch offices and to retire from localities where such service has been given without the permission of the Superintendent of Banks. A thorough investigation should be made of the motives underlying a purpose to abandon a branch office, and only after the presentation of good and sufficient reasons should a branch office be closed. Our present law leaves completely to the discretion of the bank itself a decision which may be of vital consequence and which may be determined solely in the light of self-interest.

I recommend as of parallel importance an amendment to the Bank Act which will require for the licensing of a branch office a greater capital than that now demanded. The existing statute, calling for a capital of $25,000 in excess of that otherwise required by law for each new branch office, was adopted before the present classification of capital requirements was fixed. I suggest, therefore, that the law be amended so that the capital requisites for banks having branch offices be more in harmony with the capital classification ordained for new banks. Such a change in the law would do much to encourage conservative action in the seeking of banks to open branch offices and would be helpful in insuring the continuity of such offices.

Tonic Effect of Certification of Bonds.

The work of the department during the year in its investigation and certification of public utility and real estate bond issues has been of great consequence, not only to the savings banks of the state but to the general investing public. Our labors in this reference, which have been critical and discriminating, have established for these bonds a standard of excellence demanded now by cautious investors.

The Bank Act requires that all public utility bonds, with certain minor exceptions, must be certified by the Superintendent of Banks in order that they may be legal investments for savings banks. This requirement represents one of the most significant changes in the Bank Act accomplished by amendment in 1915. Until 1913 no restriction was placed upon the purchase of public utility bonds by savings banks other than that involved in the general characterization of these securities as fixed in the Bank Act. While the Bank Act prior to 1913 determined the basic requirements of these bonds as investments for savings banks it was a practical impossibility for each bank to make its own inquiry and no opportunity was given for an official investigation of the securities which might reveal in them inherent infirmities or defects that would destroy their character as safe and proper savings bank investments.

In 1913, the Bank Act was amended to provide that all public utility bonds issued subsequent to September 1, 1913, must be certified by the Superintendent of Banks as possessing the characteristics established by the Bank Act in order to be available as savings bank investments. In 1915 the Legislature removed the limitation as to date of issue of the bonds and all such bonds, in order to be legal investments for savings banks, must now be certified by the Superintendent of Banks as meeting the requirements of the act and the Superintendent of Banks must not issue such certificate if for any reason he shall be of the opinion that such bonds are not a safe or proper investment for savings banks. The result has been a pronounced improvement in the issues themselves, a wider and more discriminating purchasing market and a stronger tone in investment values.

The incident of insuring protection to the savings banks, primary in itself, has thus been productive of measurable good in other fields of financial energy. A very large percentage of buyers of bonds will not now accept a bond which fails in the attributes required of bonds that are available for savings banks. It is a matter of common knowledge that it is the duty of this department to differentiate between the good and the bad in the securities of public utilities and to stamp with a certificate of approval only the good. The certificate of the Superintendent of Banks is not a guarantee of the ultimate safety of public utility bonds, but it is critically representative of a painstaking and expert inquiry into all of the elements which properly should contribute to the stability and soundness of such investments.

Real Estate Bonds Under Exacting Scrutiny.

While it is within the legal privilege of savings banks to invest in real estate bonds without the certification of the Superintendent of Banks, they usually prefer, because of the impracticability of individual inquiry, that the character of the bonds be established by the Superintendent of Banks. The general investor is of the same temper. While the Bank Act does not require that real estate bonds must be certified before they may become available as investments for savings banks, a flat prohibition is placed upon the advertisement of such securities as available for savings banks unless they are previously certified by the Superintendent of Banks. The financiers of real estate bonds have found it expedient, therefore, to request for their issues the certification of the Superintendent of Banks and the result has been to throw the burden of inquiry upon this department. Through the legal expedient of compelling the currency of real estate bonds to be practically dependent upon their advertisement as savings bank investments many of these issues are restrained by the State Banking Department within the limits of sound finance. They are freed from the errors of locality enthusiasm and after a painstaking and impartial inquiry take their place as proper instruments of credit.

Savings banks are thus protected from the grave danger of locality inflation of real estate values and the general investor is guarded against a natural temptation to expand appraisals in excess of actual worth. Not infrequently financiers of real estate bonds seek to utilize such issues to give standing to enterprises which have only speculative or problematical features. The intrinsic value of the land as security for the bonds is not such as to command confidence unless it is clothed with attributes which only the success of hazardous enterprise can finally give it. The consideration which, therefore, in this inquiry is of first importance, is the appraisal of the value of the real estate involved.

It is a matter of congratulation that an investigation of such vital concern to the savings banks should be absolutely free from the pressure of local influence. This department has been glad to accept the grave responsibility of this duty. Our experience in the examination of public utility and real estate bond issues offers ample and convincing evidence of the wisdom of the law.

In the labor of investigation and of certification of public utility and real estate bond issues, the department has been self sustaining. No additional expense has been placed upon the banks in this regard, the burden of the cost of the service being sustained by the financiers of the securities under scrutiny. Both the banks and the public, as well as the patrons of the bonds, reap from this arrangement a distinct advantage.

Further Protection to Savings.

Under the existing statute savings banks have the privilege of naming nonreserve depositaries without being subject to the same limitations as are fixed for reserve depositaries. This has led to a serious abuse which may be removed by placing upon the designation of non-reserve depositaries the same restrictions which now control the nomination of reserve banks. I have found that certain institutions, under the guise of selecting depositary banks to facilitate business transactions, are using this indulgence to divert savings deposits either directly, or indirectly, into affiliated banks there to be utilized in commercial banking. This practice, which flies in the face of the law safeguarding savings deposits from the jeopardy of commercial banking, may be corrected in the manner I recommend. The desire to employ savings deposits for a purpose contrary to the wishes of the depositors, and in violation of the law designed to protect them, is sufficiently insistent to demand a remedy.

I recommend, also, that some legislative action be taken to place the bonds of reclamation districts upon a plane which will better suggest their availability as investments for savings banks. The Bank Act now permits an investment by savings banks in such bonds without restriction, but the enterprises represented by said bonds are not of such known character as to warrant savings banks to invest in the issues offered for sale. Reclamation projects when properly governed, supervised and directed offer a field for legitimate finance, but until the Legislature establishes such conditions as will give to prospective purchasers definite and conclusive information regarding these enterprises no assistance may be expected from conservative savings banks. It will be highly to the advantage of reclamation districts, and consequently of great benefit to the state, if bonds of such districts were placed upon a level of excellence now being enjoyed by the bonds of irrigation districts. I recommend, therefore, legislation that will define the necessary character of these bonds and give to the public satisfying information regarding the scope, activities and responsibilities of such districts.

Means should also be taken to protect the public against persons or corporations which offer for sale mortgages with the advertised assertion that such mortgages are legal for investment by savings banks. It is a matter of familiar knowledge that such persons and corporations use their advertised description to indicate that their standing is upon an equality of safety demanded for savings banks. The practice is an extremely dangerous one as the mortgages thus advertised, with a characterization around which the state has thrown so many safeguards, are issued completely without any official investigation, without an established standard of safety, and with no scrutiny other than the confidence of the financiers of the various issues. The promoters of these real estate mortgages are free from all supervision. The published representation of the securities they name for sale is based exclusively upon their own appraisal. Where the only purpose of such advertisement is to clothe an enterprise with the standing of a supervised industry, it is imperative that safeguards and restrictions be placed around such publication. As the financiers of such real estate mortgages are in fact simply competitors of savings banks and are desirous solely of impressing the public with this character they should be restricted within limitations of complete supervision.

The permission, granted by the Legislature in 1915 to savings banks under such conditions and regulations as the Superintendent of Banks might prescribe, to discount or purchase commercial paper of the kind and character made eligible under the Federal Reserve Act and the then current regulation of the Federal Reserve Board for rediscount or for purchase in the open market by a Federal Reserve Bank, has not been susceptible of operation. Its failure has been due primarily to the fact that the Federal Reserve Board has not established the character of such paper in terms of general acceptability.

There appears, however, to be adequate justification for savings banks to loan or invest a small part of their deposits in commercial assets such as short time, high class acceptances of banks. The enormous aggregate of savings deposits in the savings banks of the state suggests their profitable employment within the confines of absolute safety. It is imperative that savings banks be equipped with a secondary reserve and that there be enacted an amendment to the Bank Act permitting savings banks to invest in such acceptances as I have described.

Rights of Creditors in Liquidation.

Legislation, which the events of the year have made imperative, is concerned with the liquidation of banks and the capacity of the Superintendent of Banks to enforce collection from the stockholders of banks in liquidation of a sum sufficient to pay the debts of the corporation. Serious doubt has been cast upon the authority of the Superintendent of Banks to act for all of the creditors of a bank in liquidation and to collect for them from the stockholders a sum that will pay the obligations of the bank. The Supreme Court of California decided that the Bank Act as adopted in 1909 did not clothe the Superintendent of Banks with power to enforce the constitutional stockholders' liability.

I deem it of first importance that such statutory change as may be necessary be adopted to give to the Superintendent of Banks indubitable authority to levy upon the stockholders of a bank in liquidation an assessment which will insure payment of the claims of the creditors of the institution. There would appear to be no question of the legality of a statute which will give to the Superintendent of Banks full privilege as a liquidator of the affairs of a closed bank to exact from the stockholders money enough to pay the debts of the corporation. A recourse to individual actions by creditors is costly, cumbersome and practically in derogation of the substantial rights of creditors. It is necessary under present conditions to provide an alternative method to protect depositors.

I am convinced that greater liberality than is evidenced in the trust sections of the Bank Act should govern our intercourse with foreign trust companies, particularly in those relations that affect our financial and commercial health and regulate our interests and association with the affairs of other states. The present law of the state permits a foreign trust company to act only as executor of or trustee under the last will and testament of any deceased person or to be co-trustee in a limited capacity with a Californian trust company. This restriction serves no good purpose, while involving probabilities of great harm, and I advise that it be eliminated, without, however, giving to foreign trust companies a right to maintain offices in this state or to transact generally their trust business.

Under the existing statute which authorizes purchase and sale agreements as between banks, the selling bank is required to maintain for a period of one year and four weeks a capital equal to one-tenth of its deposit liability and at least equal to the minimum amount required for a new bank in the political subdivision in which the selling bank has its principal place of business. There would appear to be no reason either in theory or in practice for this requirement. Under the terms of such an agreement the selling bank invariably disposes of its deposit liability and all of its other corporate obligations are also assumed with complete responsibility by the purchasing bank. A bank which has abandoned its functions as a going institution should disappear as quickly as possible and I urge the adoption of an amendment which will effect this result.

Viewed as problems in supervision, offenses against good banking may readily be classified into three groups. The first is speculation of a bank's funds by an officer or employee. Ordinarily it presents no complications in administration or supervision and is practically a negligible quantity in a consideration of the bank's affairs. In most cases only small sums are stolen and punishment of the offender follows. No practical harm is done to the bank either in loss of money or of public confidence.

A second and more serious group of delinquencies is represented in the acts of officers and directors of banks in loaning to themselves the funds entrusted to them, generally through the medium of corporations in which these officers or directors are financially interested. In their best aspect such loans become the slow and dangerous assets of a bank and in their worst expression they become an instrument of destruction.

A third and the most serious group of transgressions is represented by the banker who sacrifices safety to profit. He combines the weaknesses and dangers of speculation with the shortsightedness of greed and he involves the bank, in whose concerns he exercises authority, in transactions that promise to him large, immediate returns but which threaten ultimate disaster. A bank under the control of a speculating, over-reaching, profit seeking management that has no solicitude for the safety of investments is poisoned in all of its energies. Offenses against good banking in such an institution are hidden under manifold disguises. The most rigid inquiry is necessary to disclose the true condition of the bank. Sporadic instances of such dangerous or criminal banking still occur in the state system. They are exceptional, wholly misrepresentative of the activities and purposes of most Californian bankers and they receive from this department immediate and severe correction, in some cases involving the removal of offending officers, thus accomplishing a complete change in management.

Statistical Information.

Seven new banks were licensed during the fiscal year. Of these, six are commercial and savings banks departmentized and one is a savings bank. The advantages of the departmental system which, in the complete separation of trust, savings and commercial functions is peculiar to California, were evidenced by the licensing of three commercial departments, eight savings departments and one trust department. One bank voluntarily closed its commercial department. The licenses of three banks and four branch offices were voluntarily surrendered and ten banks sold their assets and disappeared from the system. One bank sold the assets of one of its departments.

Two national banks sold their assets to state banks. Fifteen banks increased their capitalization and two institutions reduced theirs. Two banks became extinct by consolidation. In the aggregate of corporations in the state system at the close of business on June 30, 1916, there were 117 commercial banks, 125 savings banks, 5 trust companies, 190 commercial and savings departmental banks, 18 commercial, savings and trust companies, one commercial and trust company and four savings and trust companies.

During the year calls for reports were issued for October 16, 1915, March 4, 1916, and June 30, 1916. As of the last named date, and compared in their significant elements with the report of their condition as of date June 23, 1915, state banks record the following:

Banks in liquidation are proceeding orderly to a conclusion of their affairs as all questions of authority, of relationship between the state and banks and of taxation have been settled. Some delay is being suffered because of real estate holdings which in the present state of the market are difficult to negotiate to advantage. Litigation over Sunset Road Oil Company bonds in connection with Kern Valley Bank is clogging our progress.

Appended hereto and made a part of the report are the following:

1. Summary of condition of every state bank.
2. List of new banks and branch offices.
3. Name and compensation of each person employed, and the whole amount of receipts and disbursements of the department during the fiscal year.

4. Names of banks placed in the hands of the Superintendent of Banks in process of liquidation and the amount of dividends paid thereon.
5. Miscellaneous changes in banks.
6. Reports of deposits unclaimed for more than twenty years.
7. Banks authorized to make collection of savings from school children.
8. Tabulated statements of condition of banks.

Yours very truly,

W. R. WILLIAMS,
Superintendent of Banks.
